

CHLORINE GAS NEW ELEMENT IN POLITICS IN RHODE ISLAND

Can of It Under Chair of Presiding Officer of the Senate Overcomes Four Senators But Fails to Break the Deadlock—Fist Fight Aids in Relieving Monotony.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Providence, R. I., June 19.—An attempt to break the Democratic filibuster, now entered upon its third day, was frustrated today by the timely discovery of a can of chlorine gas beneath the chair of Lieutenant Governor Felix A. Toupin. As presiding officer of the senate, Lieutenant Governor Toupin is the one man who dares not sleep. If he should succumb to weariness the Republican majority would take control of the body. Four senators were overcome before the obnoxious chemical was discovered.

The monotony of the dragging session was relieved by a fist fight in an ante-room between Senator Robert Quinn of West Warwick (Democrat) and Jack La Tendre, Republican, of Woonsocket, in which the latter was knocked to the floor. Deputy sheriffs and police continued to guard the chamber in an effort to preserve order and they are now engaged in trying to discover the identity of the person who placed the chlorine gas under the lieutenant governor's chair.

Providence, R. I., June 19.—Senator Arthur Sherman of Portsmouth, Republican floor leader, and Senator Harry A. Sanderson were removed to the Rhode Island State Hospital today in a serious condition, suffering from the effects of what is believed to be chlorine gas. Papers, saturated with the gas were discovered beneath the chair of Lieutenant Governor Felix A. Toupin.

The timely discovery of the gas saturated papers prevented additional casualties among the worn-out members of the senate and the crowd that jammed the senate chamber. The fumes became so strong that it was impossible to remain in the chamber and the Republicans agreed to an hour's recess in order to clear the room of the gas fumes.

The papers are being held in the governor's office, pending chemical analysis. The filibuster now entering its third day.

A recess was called while the senate chamber was being cleared of the fumes. The Republican members went into meeting in committee rooms and refused to come out. Ten citizens were sworn in by Sheriff Andrews to break down the door if necessary.

At the Rhode Island hospital it was said Senators Sharpe and Sanderson were not seriously affected by the gas.

An investigation disclosed that the gaseous fumes were emitted not only from the papers near the lieutenant governor's desk but from the ventilators.

In addition to Senators Sharpe and Sherman, both Republicans, Senator John H. Powers, Democrat, and Senator Harry A. Sanderson, Republican, suffered from the "gassing" though not seriously enough for medical attention.

To Investigate Rothenberg Death

Announcement was made Wednesday at Albany that Attorney General Carl Sherman will investigate the circumstances of the slaying of Howard Rothenberg, 7, at Windham, Greene county, August last.

A statement was issued that Mr. Sherman and District Attorney Coffin of Greene county will consider if further action should be taken against Mrs. Charles M. Rothenberg, mother of the slain boy, Mrs. Esther Litt, his aunt, and Burtell Brannan, who were all freed when Supreme Court Justice Howard dismissed indictments charging them with the slaying. The investigation will be made at the behest of Governor Smith, who has had appeals, both from the child's father and District Attorney Coffin. Last week Coffin had a conference with the governor.

Lutherans to Raise $500,000

Ministerium of New York in Session Here Adopt Executive Committee's Report To Raise That Amount For Wagner College—Session Closes Friday.

Wednesday's session of the 138th annual meeting of the Ministerium of the State of New York and Adjacent States at the Trinity Lutheran Church on Spring street was marked by the adoption of the executive committee's recommendation that an agent be appointed to have charge and conduct a campaign to raise $500,000 for Wagner College at Grymes Hill, Staten Island.

The afternoon session convened at 2:30 o'clock with devotional services led by the Rev. Dr. Knoll, and the business session was devoted to receiving reports and hearing accounts of the work of the Lutheran Church in this country and throughout the world.

Dr. Edgar G. Miller, executive secretary of the board of ministerial relief, presented his annual report which showed the work accomplished by the board during the past year.

Dr. H. Offermann, New York ministerial professor at the Theological Seminary of Mt. Airy, Philadelphia, presented the report of that institution.

Dr. G. Doering, director of the Orphan Asylum in Jersey City, told of the work at that institution.

An interesting account of the work of the Lutheran Church in India and Japan was made by Dr. George Drach, and the Near East Relief work was presented to the delegates by a speaker, Dr. H. Brueckner of the Seaman's Mission at Hoboken also spoke of the work at the mission.

There was no evening session of the Ministerium but the annual meeting of the Alumni of Wagner College was held at the Eagle Hotel. The meeting was followed by the annual banquet.

Today's sessions were devoted to business, and this evening there will be devotional services in the church with two addresses, one on Brotherhood and the other on the Woman's Missionary Society.

Newburgh was chosen as the convention city for the 1925 Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association at Wednesday's session in Hudson. The officers elected were:

President, John J. Moy, Hudson; first vice president, Henry E. McKenzie, Port Jervis; second vice president, Pierre Depew, Nyack; secretary, Chris W. Noll, Poughkeepsie; re-elected, treasurer, Andrew J. Murphy, Kingston, re-elected, Frank Wiley of Suffern was elected director and Henry Buxbury of Hudson as representative to the state association.

At Wednesday's session a big clambake was enjoyed by the visiting firemen.

This afternoon the convention closed with the big annual firemen's parade. The only company from Kingston was Excelsior Hose Company, 70 strong, headed by Mayor Block and former Mayor Walter P. Crane and other city officials, and the Salvation Army College Band of thirty-five pieces.

Excelsior Hose At Convention

Headed by Drum Major Dick Obenaus swinging and tossing his silver baton, the Salvation Army College Band of thirty-five instrumentalists, Excelsior Hose Company, No. 4, the 60 members and officers uniformed in red shirts, blue trousers and wearing blue caps, marched from the company's headquarters on Hurley avenue through North Front, Wall, John, Fair and Main streets, Clinton and Albany avenues, Broadway, to the Central post office, this morning, leaving the post office in large auto busses for Hudson.

The company took part this afternoon in the parade of thirty companies in connection with the annual convention of the Hudson Valley Volunteer Firemen's Association. Marching with the honoraries were Mayor Morris Block, former Mayor Walter P. Crane and William C. Shafer. The company took along a chemical auto apparatus of the city with firemen. The streets through which the firemen paraded contained many people who applauded the firemen for their fine appearance and soldierly bearing, and applauded the bandmen for the fine music rendered.

WINNERS' CLAMBAKE AT ARMORY, AUGUST 26

The winners' Sunday school class of the Clinton Avenue Methodist Church have completed arrangements for its annual clambake, which will be held Thursday, August 26th, at the state armory. One year ago it was announced that these men would hold an old-fashioned pit bake at the armory. Many men who were acquainted with the old-fashioned clambake were skeptical and some just smiled. However the men went on with their plans and fed 500 people. The clambake proved to be exactly as advertised. Everything was cooked upon a great pile of hot stones and one of the novel features of the whole incident was the chef, who in this case was the pastor of the church, the Rev. Mr. Greenwell, knows how to bake clams. He says he has served bakes for many thousands of people. The bake at the armory this year will be a little more than a dinner party as the class will endeavor to feed 1,000 people who are seated and served at the same time, and, in less than five minutes from the time all are seated at the table, every one will have been served.

KU KLUX FIGHT IN DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 19.—A fight over the insertion in the Democratic platform of a plank denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name became a virtual certainty today when George E. Brennan, the Illinois "boss," and Thomas Taggart, the Indiana leader, both allowed it to be known they feared such a declaration.

"I'd call 'em by name if I had my way," said Brennan tersely. Taggart is opposed to the Klan because the hooded order recently named its own candidate to be the Republican nominee for governor in Indiana, and the fight there next fall will closely approach an out and out Klan fight.

Submarines Collide

Washington, June 19.—The submarines S-33 and S-35 collided while making a submerged sectional attack during battle maneuvers off San Diego, California, late yesterday, according to a dispatch received at the navy department today. No personal injuries resulted. The S-35 sustained slight damage to her hull, which is being repaired by the fleet's submarine tender.

New Bridge Not Ready Until Fall

Therefore It Will Be Necessary to Have Heavy Summer Traffic Use Temporary Structure Over Esopus Creek—Railroads Oppose Grade Crossing.

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Albany, June 19.—On behalf of the city of Kingston, James Jenkiss, corporation counsel, appeared before the Public Service Commission Wednesday afternoon asking permission to establish a temporary grade crossing of the Ulster & Delaware Railroad and the New York, Ontario & Western Railroad at Washington avenue.

The necessity of the temporary grade crossing is alleged to exist on account of the construction of a new bridge over Esopus Creek just north of the viaduct, by which Washington avenue is now carried over the two railroads, and which was constructed several years ago under an order of the Commission eliminating existing grade crossings.

The application was opposed by the railroads which showed that on Sunday, June 15, 291 vehicles crossed the Washington avenue viaduct between 6 a. m. and 6 p. m., and alleged that a temporary grade crossing would be especially dangerous. The railroads also alleged that the Commission was without jurisdiction to entertain an application for a temporary crossing.

It was suggested by the chief engineer of the Commission before whom the hearing was held that it would be possible at a relatively light expense to provide a connection with a proposed temporary bridge over Esopus creek, by means of which traffic could continue to use the viaduct and thereby avoid the necessity of using the temporary grade crossing or detouring the very heavy traffic via Saugerties and Woodstock. The city officials stated that the construction would be in process until the latter part of October, so that a detour will be necessary all through the summer season and well into the fall. This bridge is one of the most highly traveled highways in this section of the state, forming a part of the main route leading into the Catskill mountain section.

Appearances were—James Jenkiss, Corporation Counsel, Kingston; C. L. Andrus, General Counsel, New York, Ontario & Western R. R.; J. H. Flemming, Secretary and General Counsel, Ulster & Delaware R. R.; J. F. Loughran, Kingston, city superintendent of highways of Ulster county; Henry D. Barrow, city engineer, Kingston; Frank M. Brink, supervisor of the town of Ulster; John Hatfield, town superintendent of highways of town of Ulster.

NO ADMISSION TO HEAR DR. BARTHOLOMEW

There seems to be some confusion in the minds of the people concerning the special address at Clinton Avenue Church Friday evening. A great many people seem to think there must be an admission charge. This probably comes from the original plan of a banquet for which many tickets were sold, but the Rev. Mr. Greenwell wishes to state that the doors of the church will be open at 7:30 and any and all who care to may hear Dr. Bartholomew. Sunday school workers throughout this section will probably want to hear him as Dr. Bartholomew teaches the world's largest Sunday school class. The doctor and his class have organized men's classes in this section of the country that now have an enrollment of 25,000 men. The service will start at 8 o'clock.

The Rev. O. F. Bartholomew, D. D., has held the pastorate of the First Methodist Church of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., for 25 consecutive years. During the last year his church has completed a building that cost $125,000, which is used almost entirely for Sunday school work.

Kingston Nurses Are Going to Yale

Since its reorganization scarcely a month passes that the Kingston City Hospital does not introduce into its administrative or educational work some improvement which tends to give the institution a higher rating among the hospitals of the state.

The Board of Managers is now making announcement that on July 1 the nurses training school of this hospital establishes an affiliation with the school of nursing of Yale University.

This means that the senior nurses of the training school will for six months be students of the splendid school maintained as a branch of Yale, in New Haven, Conn.

The dean of this school is Miss Anna Goodrich, who is one of the recognized leaders in educational work of nurses in the country.

This is a wonderful opportunity for the pupil nurses of the Kingston City Hospital who have heretofore had their outside work at Bellevue Hospital in New York city, but will find at Yale a more modern course and a more thorough training in the branches which they need to round out the graduating term, such as diseases of children and certain branches of internal medicine.

The four senior nurses who are leaving for New Haven June 29, are Miss Mabel Dudley, Miss Anna Sleight, Mrs. Emily Smith and Miss Lita Harker, daughter of Dr. Harker of Kerhonkson.

It is due to the efforts of Miss Martha Morningstar, the director of the training school, that this affiliation with Yale has been consummated, and it is a matter of congratulation for the hospital and for the city.

The hospital has recently secured the services of Mrs. Mabel Walton of Columbus, Ohio, as dietitian. Besides instructing the pupil nurses in dietetics, she supervises the meals of the patients with particular attention to those whose diet forms part of their treatment.

Mrs. Walton is from Salem College, N. C. She was assistant dietitian of the city hospital at Winston-Salem, N. C., and has also been instructress in home economics at the University of Kentucky.

Another new member of the faculty here is Miss Foulkes from the Buffalo City Hospital training school, who will instruct the pupils here.

Miss Lillie Lee is the newly appointed supervisor of the second floor, where most of the private rooms are.

Now equipment is being installed in various parts of the hospital, the latest being a fine modern operating table which has been ordered for the third floor operating room by a friend who is yet anonymous.

Prof. Peck will be glad to discuss any other orchard practice which you will bring to his attention. This is one more opportunity for fruit men to get together with a man who knows the game.

Weston Has Quit County Forever

Famous Pedestrian Will Live at Norristown, Penna.—Investigation of Attack Upon Weston Is Without Success.

Edward Payson Weston eighty six year old professional pedestrian, whose house near Plutarch was the scene of a recent attack by unknown parties, has announced that he has left Ulster county forever and will take up his residence at Norristown, Pennsylvania where he will spend the remainder of his life. He says the nervousness brought on by the alleged attack upon his home by a gang of ruffians caused him to leave from the wilds where he had resided for several years since retiring and coming to Ulster county.

Weston also states that he is still able to walk and would like to show the athletic world that he is still able to compete in the walking game. He states that his long years in the professional walking world has kept him in excellent health.

Sometime ago he says he promised his sister who is 84 years old that he would do no walking without her permission and that he now has her permission to walk provided he will work for "Coolidge" for president. Weston says he told his sister he would walk for Coolidge, provided Governor Smith was not nominated for the presidency but if Smith is named he will work for him because he says he admires him "for his kind heart."

After the Weston home near Plutarch was broken up after an alleged night attack by ruffians Weston stated he would see that justice was done if he had to personally appeal to Governor Smith for aid. The authorities have made a very thorough investigation of the affair at the Weston home but their investigation so far as is known has not met with much success in locating the several men who it is said attacked the Weston home at nightfall and broke practically every window in the house with rocks and sticks.

A Suicide At Ellenville

Daniel Lane, aged about 50 years, a Spanish War veteran, committed suicide at Ellenville Tuesday afternoon and the body was found later that day by boys who were playing ball near the old tannery on Canal street. Near the body was found a small phial which had contained carbolic acid.

Lane had been in ill health for some time and had threatened to take his life. Tuesday afternoon he went to one of the old tannery buildings on Canal street and near the end of one of the buildings evidently took the contents of the bottle. The body was discovered about 7 o'clock and from the condition of the body he had been dead but a short time. Coroner Humiston of Kerhonkson called and issued the necessary permit to move the body.

Deceased is survived by a wife and three children.

They flew from Fort Hamilton in one hour and ten minutes arriving and moored about 6 o'clock last evening on the Port Jervis side of the Rondout creek. They were brought to the Hotel Stuyvesant by Christopher W. Winne, whom they had met several months ago while on a trip up the river, in his automobile, where they had dinner. Later they made a call on Admiral Francis J. Higginson at The Huntington where they were entertained by the admiral with reminiscences of his active naval career, and obtained his views as to the importance of seaplane service in wars of the future.

This morning Captain Iseman and Demonet with Admiral Higginson visited the seaplane and viewed locations that might make satisfactory mooring places.

RESTORE TRAFFIC ON MISSISSIPPI

Army Engineers Build Dams to Make River Navigable to St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn.—From the windows of the train as it winds its way along the Mississippi between Chicago and the Twin Cities one may note innumerable odd-looking structures of brush and stone jutting out into the river. Some are but a few yards long, others a hundred yards or more. From a distance they look not unlike boat docks.

At points where the train makes a curve, affording a sweeping view up or down the river, the passenger may see a score or more of these projections within the space of a mile or two.

In reply to the curious passenger the trainman explains that they are "Government dams," and the passenger, settling back in his seat, accepts the explanation, but wonders why in the world Uncle Sam is building such a string of queer-looking dams. For at no point do they entirely span the river and they do not have the massive appearance of the ordinary river dam.

All along the Mississippi, from St. Paul down to St. Louis, these wing or spur dams, as they are officially known among government engineers, may be seen. Three thousand have been constructed between Minneapolis and Prairie du Chien, Wis., and about 1,000 more are to be made. Their purpose is to narrow the channel of the Father of Waters so as to maintain a depth of six feet throughout the length of the upper Mississippi at low-water stage. In other words, these dams form a straight jacket by which it is hoped to put the great waterway in navigable shape for freight-carrying boats, which have been virtually unknown on the upper river for ten years and more.

Making the River Navigable.

For half a century and more government engineers have been "disciplining" the Mississippi. In the days before the Civil war, Robert E. Lee was assigned by the War department to do engineering work on the river. The real improvement work, however, began back in 1878, when the government sought to establish and maintain a minimum channel depth of 4½ feet. In those years, in ordinary seasons, a freighter could come all the way up the river to the Twin Cities. But in some years the stage of water ranged down to less than three feet, making it impossible for the larger boats to get above Winona, Minn., thus interfering greatly with regular river traffic. It was to correct this fault and make the river navigable every year from St. Louis to the Twin Cities that the improvement work was inaugurated and maintained. To date something like $33,000,000 has been spent, and while the army engineers make a claim of substantial results, there is yet much work to be done before the project is complete.

The present project was started in 1907 and at the close of the last fiscal year it was estimated that $13,900,000 had been expended on it. That at that time was about 53 per cent complete.

The engineering theory of the project is quite simple. The Mississippi is a widening, more or less intractable stream that spreads itself out over the entire river bed. This is done at the expense of the main channel through which the boats must travel. To curb this wastefulness on the part of the Mississippi, the government engineers are building this system of dams on both sides throughout its course. They serve to discourage the river from spreading its waters over the wide valley and by contracting the stream within narrower limits the dams help in washing out the main channel and making it deeper. The engineers aim to provide a channel ranging from 300 feet wide at the upper end to 1,400 feet at the mouth of the Missouri.

River Solidifies the Sands.

Dams are made of brush and stones, the brush to divert the water and the rocks to hold the brush in place. The longer the dams stand the firmer and more impervious they become. At first the river spreads out between two of the new dams, finds itself obstructed, and recedes, depositing sand between the dams. As this process keeps up eventually a new river bank is built up, vegetation appears and nothing short of a flood will drive the river up over the new bank.

At some points along the river the engineers find it advisable to riprap the banks with brush and stone to prevent them washing out and at other points, where the stream has wandered off into a slough, closing dams have been constructed, blocking the river from such forays. All of this work tends to throw the main body of water into a narrower, deeper channel with the ultimate aim of providing a navigable waterway throughout the season to the head of navigation, the Twin Cities.

This goal is in sight. For the first time in years a barge carrying a cargo of freight from St. Louis and other down river points reached the Twin Cities this spring. There are three or four other barges in this fleet, and the company operating them hopes to maintain a regular schedule throughout the season. How well they will succeed is a question. All the rivers and streams in this section are low this year and will be yet lower before the summer is over, when the spring freshets and rains have spent themselves. Then will come the real test of the river.

Last year a passenger boat from St. Louis tried to reach the Twin Cities. It made fairly good progress until it got beyond Winona, the first real "port of call" in Minnesota. Then it began to encounter difficulties and finally had to abandon its trip entirely at Hastings, Minn., some 20 miles below St. Paul. With due allowance for the extremely low stage of water last year the river work nevertheless maintain that a boat properly built and handled can navigate to St. Paul today at low water stage.

The new barges going in service this year are designed especially for the upper Mississippi river. They are built to operate in less than a six-foot water stage. But before there can be a genuine revival of river traffic, say the engineers, there must be more adequate terminal and transfer facilities at the cities and towns along the river. A start has been made in that direction, but that is about all. At Alton, Ill., a transfer unit has been installed with railroad connections, and an expeditious method of moving freight to a from cars or wagons and boats has been provided. This transfer is owned by a railway company. A commencement has been made by construction of sea walls and in some cases installation of railway tracks at St. Paul, Minneapolis, Davenport and Muscatine. All of these proposed terminals are municipally owned and will be available for public use.

Ford Plans to Use River.

A recent factor in the revival of this river traffic is Henry Ford. He is now constructing a $10,000,000 manufacturing and distributing plant at St. Paul. It stands on the banks of the Mississippi and his engineers have indicated that they propose to utilize the river to the fullest practicable extent in transporting materials and products to and from the St. Paul plant.

After the enforced winter layoff, government crews have resumed their work of "straitjacketing" the upper Mississippi. Crews with dredges are working out of St. Paul and Rock Island. There is a stretch of about 635 miles between the head of navigation at St. Louis, and the progress of the work depends largely on the appropriations made each year by congress. It is expected that all funds now available will be exhausted by June 30, 1924, and an appropriation of $1,300,000 is now being sought to carry on work for the next fiscal year. It is estimated that the amount of money needed to complete the project is $11,703,000.

This work applies only to the upper Mississippi, that is, between the Twin Cities and St. Louis. From St. Louis on down another and greater project is under way. When both are completed, which will not be for some years to come, there will be a commercial waterway, approximately 1,900 miles in length. The upper portion of this waterway is navigable about eight months of the year. And some river enthusiasts hope to see the time when Lake Superior will be connected by water with the Gulf of Mexico, 2,000 miles to the south.—New York Times.

Save California Forests of Redwood to Posterity

San Francisco.—Redwood trees with a value of approximately $1,000,000 have been saved for all time in central and northern California through the efforts of the Save-the-Redwoods league.

The league was organized less than four years ago. Individuals and lumber companies have donated lands valued at $500,000 to the movement. The state, Humboldt county and citizens have contributed $475,000 in money to the movement for purchasing other lands.

"And yet the movement has just begun," said Dr. W. F. Bade, an official of the organization. "While 14 miles along the Redwood highway have been preserved, there are several hundred miles, many of them heavily timbered, which should be preserved. We look forward to the establishment of a national redwood park of at least 20,000 acres."

Town in Massachusetts Has 2,500 Bachelors

Clinton, Mass.—There are 2,500 bachelors in this town, according to statistics given out by Town Clerk Carr. Some are tall and others small, fat and thin, blond and brunette, many with beautiful hair, and those seen very seldom at the barber shop—bald, or toupee wearers.

Clinton is often called the "Girls' Paradise." Competition here is very keen for each girl's hand.

If any Clinton girl remains an unmarried jewel it's her own fault.

Carr has other statistics relative to Clinton's population. The town has 8,000 married men, he said, and consequently 3,000 married women. The families average two children.

Army of One

The Mount Everest climbers, making their second attempt, had at last accounts reached Sikkim frontier, with good weather and favorable progress. The report in the New York Times tells much of interest concerning the country and its peoples. The following is an incident:

"At the frontier, on crossing into independent Sikkim, we were met by the guard, a single policeman. When we had finished the necessary official documents, 'right-hand salute!' roared the guard at himself, and duly saluted with his right hand. 'Left turn!' he bellowed, and turned to the left. 'Quick march!' he shrieked, and straightway took himself off. He was a Gurka, and all Gurkas love drilling themselves if they cannot get anyone else to drill them."

New Victor Records by McCormack and Paderewski

As examples of perfect tone production the voice of McCormack and the playing of Paderewski are really marvelous. As examples of what the Victor alone can offer, they are typical.

In making Victor Records Paderewski uses his own piano, knowing that the Victrola and Victor Records reproduce minutely tone, technique and individual artistry.

The amazing accuracy of reproduction in the records of these two great artists extends to all Victor Records when played upon the Victrola.

The first number is a fine light-moving fox trot with some comedy yodel effects. The second is cheerful yet with sentiment, and the piano has some notable solo work. Both are splendidly recorded—a delight for dancing.

Nightingale—Waltz S. S. Leviathan Orchestra 19342 .75
Sunrise and You—Medley Waltz The Troubadours

Two fine examples of the "American slow waltz." The first one with "two-tone" whistling effects and a vocal refrain; the second on two famous Arthur Penn melodies. Dance records of the kind for which the Victor is famous.

TODAY WE CELEBRATE

SOPHIE OF HANOVER.

One of the most esteemed women connected with the royal house of Hanover was Sophie (the Electress) who died in June 1714.

She was the wife of Ernest Augustus who succeeded his brother to the Electoral dignity in 1692, and daughter of Elizabeth, wife of the Elector Palatine, Frederick V, and granddaughter of James I, of England.

By their marriage the Hanoverian House was connected with that of England and Scotland. Their son, George Louis, succeeded his father in the Duchy of Calenberg, and in the Electoral dignity in 1698 and by marrying his cousin, Sophia Dorothy, he united the two Duchies of Calenberg and Lüneburg on the death of George William in 1705.

YALE SCIENTIFIC SCHOOL.

Yale University will celebrate today the anniversary of the founder of Sheffield Scientific School at Yale University, Joseph Sheffield, a wealthy merchant, who was born 131 years ago today, June 19, 1793.

The famous institution, which now ranks with Yale itself in usefulness and attendance, was founded in 1847, Sheffield giving it an endowment of one million dollars, and it was reorganized on a more extensive scale in 1860. It ranks among the first of the American Technical schools, although the pioneer in that field of education was the Rensselaer Institute, established in Troy, N. Y., in 1824 by Stephen Van Rensselaer.

This institute had no endowment but its founder made himself responsible for its expense. Ninety-eight years ago the Troy School graduated nine men with the degree of B. S. and in 1835 Rensselaer conferred the first American degree in engineering, that of C. E., upon four graduates. Sheffield School at Yale and the scientific school at Dartmouth then entered this educational field, which has now been extended to include scores of flourishing institutions, with thousands of graduates, all over the United States and Canada.

COLONIAL CONGRESS.

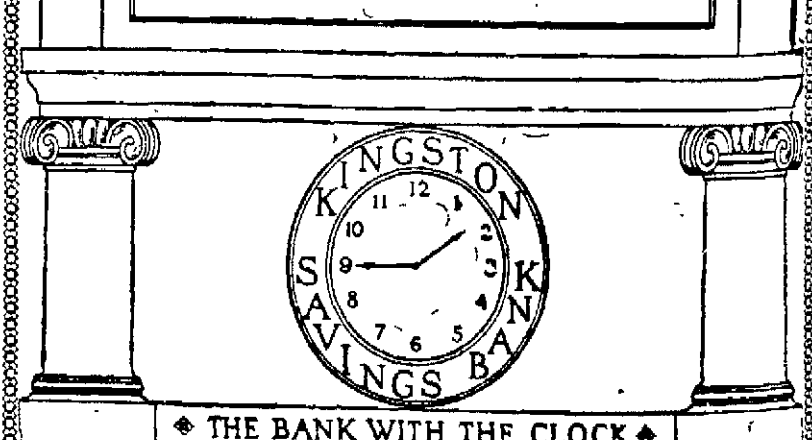

The first Colonial Congress, called for the purpose of considering a confederacy of the various American Colonies, was convened in Albany, N. Y., on this date in 1754. New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, Pennsylvania and Maryland were represented. In the prospect of war with France the British ministry had advised the colonists to hold a general convention, to provide for the general defense. Going beyond the advice of the ministers, the congress proposed a scheme of confederation, which was the germ of the United States constitution. Its author was Benjamin Franklin. The plan was finally rejected by the colonies, because it was alleged, it gave too much power to the crown, and disapproved by the crown because it left too much authority to the people.

Have You This Habit?

By Margaret Morison

JOHN VAN TRIM, JR.

JOHN VAN TRIM, JR., was assistant business manager in the big office, and, when his chief learned that John's wife was expecting her first baby he asked the Van Trims to spend a week-end out of town with him and his sister. The night of their arrival was hot and breathless. Mrs. Van Trim appeared for dinner in a simple, fresh-looking dress, open becomingly at the neck, that set off her pretty fair hair. Her husband, who had arrived from the city on the same train, came in wearing his business suit, his collar wilted, his trousers needing pressing, his hair disheveled.

Afterward the chief spoke of charming Mrs. Van Trim, but when his sister suggested asking out the young couple again, he was silent. She answered an unspoken comment: "It wasn't very worldly wise of the boy to come in so dragged-looking, my dear; but there wasn't much time, and a must have been hot and tired."

"That's just my objection," replied the chief. "If by this time Van Trim can't manage, in spite of obstacles, to be presentable on a visit to his boss, he hasn't the brains I'm looking for." Nevertheless, the chief's sister kept in touch with the Van Trims. One day, five years later, when her brother asked her what she knew of their fortunes, she had to admit that John had gone down hill. For she was remembering his baggy knees, his unpolished shoes, his frayed cravat and soiled collar and neglected nails. What might have been explained as "mere" laziness five years before was actual slovenliness now.

Then the chief retired and he and his sister went abroad to live. Years later they returned for a visit. One day the new president of the old concern came out to see them. He was a distinguished, energetic, courteous gentleman of forty-five or fifty. They remembered him as a clerk working under John Van Trim, and they asked him what he knew of the Van Trims. He hesitated. "A sad thing," he said, finally, "Van Trim simply didn't make good. We kept him on as long as we possibly could, but at last he became so seedy, mentally and physically, that people would stare at him when they came into the office. He looked like a tramp. We simply had to drop him."

Three-Piece Outfit of Black Roshanara Crepe

Here is an outfit that will appeal to all women for wear on cool days and evenings. It is constructed of black Roshanara crepe, with crepe blouse and coat piped in white. A hat of black and white is worn.

Fabrics That Are Light in Weight, Fine Texture

The season's styles for young and very young women in suits and dresses for general utility, street, country, sports, travel are established by prominent couturiers who go in for this branch of fashionable dress design, in some especially suitable and artistic woolsens, new in weave, new in name. They are light in weight, gentle in texture, fine in quality and ultramodern in pattern.

Some of these are: The Carre check wools, the Tukon and Navajo plaids, Repingie, Princess Mary Plaid, Repp de Laine and Patou crepe, for the later season models. The latest models from Parisian designers present these in two-piece suits, with overblouses of crepe, linen, pongee or muslin; three-piece suits, the blouse and skirt attached, but of contrasting colors, and the one-piece frock, of plaid, check, block pattern or plain material.

Coats for the hillputian department, both juniors' and misses', are all engaging in cut and fabric. Knitted things are shown in miniature for little fellows—little dresses of a light color with a little plaited cape to match, and collar of white Angora. All up and down the scale, frocks, capes or coats and hats made to match are the very best style.

A novelty in materials among the many introduced this season, and one that is especially appropriate for young girls' suits and frocks, is alpaca of the shimmering silky quality that is shown in all the lovely summer shades.

Fur and Chiffon

Scarfs are such an integral part of the costume that one finds it necessary to include a large number in the wardrobe. For formal wear those that combine fur with crepe or chiffon are new and exceedingly smart. One of the prettiest has a flat stole collar of white fox with long ends of white chiffon banded with fox.

Blouse and Skirt That Will Appeal to Misses

This dainty outfit is produced from yellow crepe de chine for the blouse, which is braided in yellow and brown, the skirt being of tan Roshanara broad crepe.

Making Progress

The Sport Writer—"Do you think golf has any effect on McSlough's hitting?" The Manager—"Some. He's got so he yells 'fore' every time he goes to bat."

White and Black for Neat Outfit

Combination Affords Attire Much Admired; Sash and Tie Are Features.

It is now almost de rigueur to have the costume all of one shade, or as nearly so as may be, notes a fashion authority in the New York Times. A gown of beige, gray, brown or black has a hat, shoes, stockings and gloves to match. A frock of black and white and black may have the accompaniments white or black, preferably the latter, at least in the item of shoes. Some attractive little jersey suits of white have with them, a hat of one color, or combination of colors, and a scarf, the lining of which matches the hat.

In the establishment of one prominent importer is shown a sports suit of white flannel, in which a touch of scarlet is introduced. A sash of scarlet is wound about the soft silk blouse at the line of the hip, and a monogram is embroidered on the pocket flap on one side of the jacket. A width of the crepe is wound about the milan sports hat, and the stockings and shoes of this gay little outfit combine white suede and glace kid.

The Roman sash in all its distinction is being revived in most attractive ways. Long ago, we are told, every nice young girl had a Roman sash, or several Roman sashes, which she wore about the waist of her white muslin frock. The width and length of that sash were regarded by her contemporaries as a gauge of the wearer's importance as a personage in her little world of fashion, and some of these gorgeous colored ribbons have been preserved as something precious by the older women of today, who find them a high light in the latest styles.

Sash lengths with ends trimmed with fringe matching in strands the colors of the sash are worn knotted at one side of a gown, holding the draped material, or about the low waistline. The finished lengths are also used as neck scarfs, adding a gay, colorful note to a black gown or one of plain color, and hats, particularly the panamas and other sports hats, are smartly trimmed with "Roman" ribbon wound tightly about the crown.

The larger shops are offering a great variety of these Roman ribbons in every width from the sash to the inch-wide, which is meant to be used as a band on tailored hats, as a necktie on the one-piece frock and blouse, and as a narrow belt.

Next in the display of ribbons are the rainbow-shaded ribbons. They are lovely, an artistic achievement in color harmonies. In some of the sash widths rainbow colors are beautifully blended, and in others one color is softly shaded from dark to light with charmingly decorative effect.

Following the heavily brocaded metal and repousse effects in ribbons introduced during the winter, these new versions of a quaint style form an important feature in the spring and summer wardrobe.

Match Accessories

The smart woman has decided to have her accessories match so far as possible. Today her fan matches her little evening wristbag, often in both color and materials, and her shoes match her fan. All these are often in a color sharply contrasting with that of the gown.

Air of Simplicity

Every effort now is bent toward simplicity in frocks. The lines are straight and simple, and the whole air of the costume is that of avoiding heaviness and overelaboration.

Useful River Mud

By a process reported to have been discovered in England, river mud may be manufactured into dyes with which papers and lightweight fabrics can be colored.

KINGSTON, N. Y., JUNE 19, 1924.

AN EPOCHAL MEMORIAL.

A "bloody shirt" campaign is now so remote in both time and sentiment that probably a large proportion of the youth of America would now need to have that term explained. Not only would it be useless in the campaign of 1924 to seek to win votes on the ancient issues of the War for Secession but now no heed would be given even to a protest against the coining of silver half dollars by the Treasury for the Stone Mountain Confederate Association, under the direction of which Gutzon Borglum, the Utah sculptor, is carving in relief on the smooth perpendicular face of Stone Mountain in Georgia a colossal representation of a Confederate army going forth to battle under the leadership of the great soldier, Robert E. Lee. No longer ago than the middle eighteenth century the memorial itself would have caused wide protest in the Northern States, let alone the passage of a bill by congress to authorize the Treasury to coin money in connection with the same memorial of American heroism and valor.

The change of feeling began in earnest when in 1898 North and South fought together in the Spanish-American War, and was made complete and final when, in the World War, Pershing selected the Twenty-seventh division, with its sons of the North, and the Thirtieth, with its sons of the South, to break through the Hindenburg line. After that the war between North and South definitely passed into history to take its place among the world's dead issues, leaving little room behind it than was left generations after the Wars of the Roses which had rent England itself asunder. Such are the achievements of time, developing commerce and increasing identity of interests.

LIFE'S WORK AND PLAY.

The London Herald has published an interesting statistical estimate of the time spent in the various occupations of a typical life of about three score years and ten, from the longest to the shortest occupation—as follows: Sleep, 22 years; eating, 13 years; reading, 7 years; working, 3 years; idling, 2 and a half years; bathing, shaving and dressing, 2 and a quarter years; walking, tramping, etc., 2 and a quarter years; play, 1 and three-quarter years; sickness, 1 year and a half; school, 1 year and a quarter; entertainments, etc., a half year; "sweethearting," 60 days; waiting for trains, 15 days; sundries, 7 years.

Obviously the only estimate in this list that is based on the experience of practically everyone is that giving sleep 22 years. Nearly all of us pass one-third of our lives in bed, although ability to enjoy eight hours of the "sweet restorer" is far from universal. The estimate of 18 years for work will be thought too low. With the exception of tramps, gentlemen of leisure, young women of prosperous families, and idlers in general, the typical man spends at least a third of the 24 hours in labor or devotion to business, in recognition of which we have the eight-hour law. Some of the other averages, the time spent in eating, for example, may be safe enough, but in others there are as many differences as there are people. The promptly successful swain might accept 60 days as a reasonable average for "sweethearting," but the series of courtships that in many instances precede attainment would of course consume more time. In these days of automobiles an American statistician would fix upon a large figure for motoring (which the London man does not even mention) and would perhaps omit walking altogether.

A "THRILLER" IN REAL LIFE.

Truth is indeed stranger than fiction if we can accept the story of William Lebish, the bank messenger who disappeared from New York with $45,000 in negotiable bonds and later reappeared at Morgan City, La., with the bonds intact and a very remarkable alibi. Mr. Lebish's story is that he was kidnapped, forced into an armored car, beaten and drugged and conveyed in an inhuman condition all the way to the borders of a desolate swamp in Louisiana. There he contrived to convince his captors that the bonds were non-negotiable, and, when one of them stepped out of the hut, he overpowered and bound the other. When the other bandit returned Mr. Lebish tackled him in turn, conquered and bound him, hid the bonds, and lay down to rest. But while the victor was deep in his well-earned slumber the bandits worked out of their ropes, seized and again beat their victim. But, failing to make him reveal the hiding place of the bonds, they gave it up and took themselves off.

From the old classics to the penny dreadful there has never been a "thriller" to beat this in some of its particulars, but like all "thrillers," it is not without its improbabilities. Of course, motor bandits are on the watch for bank messengers and the kidnapping of Lebish is not improbable by itself, but why should they take the risk of motoring a thousand miles before they pocketed the bonds and got rid of Lebish? Would they not be intelligent enough to know whether the bonds were negotiable or not? And does Mr. Lebish look like the stout hearted athletic hero which his story makes of him? Having suggested so much of doubt, it should be added, as a further suggestion, that a disappearing bank messenger who in cooler moments repents and seeks to make restitution is deserving of merciful consideration.

That Body of Yours

CAUGHT NAPPING.

I watched a clever amateur boxer attempt to make a "come back" after five years away from boxing, owing to a war injury.

He won his bout, but he was far from the finished boxer that he had been years before.

Although the bout was only one of three rounds, it was well into the second round before I realized just what was wrong with his work.

He had lost his judgment of distance, and the "timing" of his blows.

The nerve centers that control this part of his nervous and muscular make-up had been "out of use" for so long, that he had not "educated" them again to the point where they had been before.

A blow that he should have landed or guarded within a certain part of a second, took just a fraction longer. His eye was just a fraction slower in grasping openings and so forth.

Now why do I tell you all this? Well, perhaps you have been ill, have been under the weather for awhile.

Possibly an attack of flu, or just ordinary indigestion.

You have been forced to remain at home, to remain in bed in fact, for a number of days or weeks.

The day comes when you are to get up, and as you step out on the floor you have such a feeling of "faintness" that you are glad to get back on the bed again.

What has happened? Well, all the days or weeks you have been lying so quietly in bed, there has been no call for much work on the part of the body.

The nerve centers therefore that govern the muscular part of the body, have practically gone to sleep for the time being, because there are not any calls made upon them.

And so when you attempted to get up, they were caught "napping" and did not send the necessary "force" to your heart to pump the amount of blood necessary to do the extra work.

Your blood was not on full pressure as it were, and hence your faintness.

And yet later in the day when you have given notice to your brain that you are going to get up, and you get up slowly and gradually, you are able to do so without the feeling of faintness you previously experienced.

And it is the same with every part of that body of yours.

If you don't completely fill your lungs regularly, and take a few long breaths, the nervous mechanism controlling breathing isn't prepared for such an onslaught and can't accommodate itself to your needs fast enough.

Similarly with your heart. You haven't run a block for years and then suddenly decide to run for a car.

The result is palpitation and a feeling of weakness.

As you grow older it was not intended that you should indulge in the strenuous games of your youth, but it was not meant that you quit exercise or work completely.

The advice "taper off gradually" as the years go by, is mighty sound.

Around Orchard

CARE AND ATTENTION FOR HOME ORCHARDS

(By R. F. PAYNE, Extension Horticulturist, North Carolina Agricultural College.)

Abundance of moisture in the spring and early summer is essential to the production of a maximum crop of fruit and the setting of sufficient fruit buds for next year's crop. Early plowing and frequent working with a smoothing harrow will conserve a large amount of moisture when most needed by the tree.

Every orchard should be plowed once each season, unless it is too hilly land where there is danger from washing; then alternate row cultivation should be practiced if possible. This means that every other row of trees is cultivated and the alternate rows are left in sod. The rows in cultivation should be seeded down each year and the alternate row should be put under cultivation the next year. Only apples and pears should ever be put in sod.

Where the land will not wash and no cover crop is being grown, the annual plowing may be done any time during the winter that soil conditions will permit. Plowing should be deferred until late in the spring if a cover crop is being grown, in order to let it make as much growth as possible. The orchard should be plowed early enough to get the benefit of the late spring rains. The cover crop should not be allowed to head, as this will rob the trees of needed moisture.

Where annual plowing is practiced the soil should be turned eight to ten inches deep, and plowed crosswise every other time to break the ground between the rows. If annual plowing has not been practiced, it is not advisable to plow so deep, as it will injure too many of the small feeding roots which are near the surface. In such orchards this depth should be increased about one inch each year until the desired depth has been reached. Then it should be turned this deep annually.

After the orchard has been plowed it should be disked and harrowed so the top will be in a fine pulverized condition. The topsoil should be stirred with a smoothing harrow every ten to fourteen days or after heavy rains, until the middle to the latter part of June. The harrowing should be crosswise every other time. Both the plowing and harrowing should be of such a nature as not to leave the trees on a mound.

Care should be exercised in working the trees to prevent the tearing or cultivating tools from skinning them, as best results can never be obtained from a bruised or damaged tree.

These fundamental orchard operations—plowing and harrowing—should not be neglected, as the trees need an abundance of moisture early in the season, and the above recommendations will conserve it when needed most. Plans should be made now to sow a green manuring crop of soy beans or cowpeas in the orchard at the last cultivation.

Insect Responsible for Wormy Plum and Peach

The insect responsible for wormy peaches and plums is the plum curculio. The worms in peaches are the young grubs of this curculio. They belong to the same family as the boll weevil. Thorough spraying, picking up and destroying drops and frequently cultivating are the control measures.

The curculio makes two kinds of punctures in the peaches, one for feeding purposes and the other in which to lay its eggs. J. R. Walsh, entomologist of the Florida experiment station, says there are two broods of this weevil. The first attacks the peaches just after the blooming period, and the second just before they ripen. The eggs of the first brood are laid in the young peaches which soon drop. The grub continues to live in the peach until full grown, when it enters the ground to go into the pupal stage.

It is, therefore, very important that these young peach drops be picked up before these weevils have had time to complete their development and enter the ground. They should be picked up once or twice a week and burned or thoroughly cooked in hot water.

Thorough cultivation of the orchard will help to reduce the weevil infestation, as usually the insects do not enter the ground very deeply. Cultivation will turn many of them up where their numerous enemies can find them.

The peaches should be sprayed with lead arsenate (dissolved in lime water) just as the petals are falling. In Florida, all peaches are likely to bloom at the same time, but they should be sprayed when enough blossoms have appeared to set a crop.

Value of Trees on Farm

Trees are among Nature's most useful and beautiful gifts. Their financial value is great. They form a shelter belt that will protect the house and barns from the cold winds. By protecting the house it means a saving of fuel which indirectly means saving money. By protecting the barns the food fed to stock will be used to build up the bodies of the animals instead of to warm them. A windbreak keeps the snow from drifting in the yards.

Puzzled Germans

There was once an operator at the Crookhaven wireless station named Binns, whose breakfasts for 865 days every year consisted of two hard-boiled eggs. During the war he was an operator in a very important position in the grand fleet and a certain most secret signal was required to be sent. He was puzzled for a moment, and then, with his hand upon the Morse key, tapped out the extraordinary words, which no doubt puzzled every German listening in: "Two hard-boiled eggs transmitting. Urgent." He rapped this out half a dozen times and the stations around the coast were much mystified. But Crookhaven stations sprang alert at once. They knew it was Binns. They took his secret message for the admiralty and replied: "O. K. Two hard-boiled eggs." The result of that code message was claimed to be the sinking of a German cruiser, writes William Le Queux in "Things I Know."

Two Claim Quotation

In her book entitled "Borrowings," Mrs. Sarah Yule credits the quotation "If a man write a better book, preach a better sermon, or make a better mousetrap than his neighbor, though he build his house in the woods, the world will make a beaten path to his door" to Emerson. She said she copied it in a notebook from a lecture delivered by the great philosopher. But the quotation was the occasion of a long controversy, owing to Elbert Hubbard's claim to its authorship. Hubbard stated positively upon two different occasions that he was the author of the quotation. Mrs. Yule's book was published in 1908. It appears that Hubbard's claim was not made until 1910.

First "Flying" Feat

Rather Crude Affair

A slate tablet in the yard of Old North church, Boston, marks the place from which the first flying feat in this country was made. The flight was accomplished by John Childs, an Englishman, who had become famous for his gliding flights from the tops of steeples. His glider was a crude affair, the operator being suspended by a sort of harness. The length of the flight was about 700 feet. It was successfully repeated. The inscription on the tablet reads: "Here, on Sept. 13, 1757, John Childs, who had given public notice of his intention to fly from the steeple of Dr. Outler's church, performed it to the satisfaction of a great number of spectators. In 1923, the year of the first continuous flight across the continent, this tablet has been placed by the Massachusetts Society of the Colonial Dames, to commemorate the two events."

BURHANS PUPILS GIVE PLEASING PIANO RECITAL

The piano recital given in the Church of the Comforter, Wednesday evening, by pupils of Miss Nettie Burhans was very interesting and entertaining. Beginning with three pupils, who commenced their musical study in February of this year, and on through the list of young pupils under 12 years of age, the selections were finely played, showing well balanced technique and musical feeling.

Since all the numbers were so well rendered in every particular by advanced pupils, each with her individual merit and style, it is difficult to mention any one separately. But, perhaps, the brilliancy of "Capricante" by Kathleen Meeker, and the singing quality of "Thornrose" by Eleanor Phinney, deserve special notice.

The last three numbers on the program were exquisitely interpreted by Miss Helen Carpenter. The sketchy character of "Papillons," the dash of surf and song in the "Scotch Poem," and the daintiness and beauty of the "Rondo Capriccioso" were beautifully expressed.

The program was as follows:
Under the Lindsens..... Beaumont
Helen Cragin
Jolly Farmer..... Schumann
Ruth Nickerson
The Huntsman's Song..... Schumann
Doris Nickerson
Sonatina Movement..... Spindler
Evel Petri
Canzonetta..... Hollander
Ruth Stevens
Menuetto..... Moter
Marjorie Fowler
Camp of the Gypsies..... Behr
Louise Harder
The Shepherd Boy..... Wilson
Margaret Whitney
Chaconne..... Durand
Mildred Freer
Will O' the Wisp..... Jungmann
Esther Kohan
Petit Bolero..... Ravina
Kathleen Golden
Columbine Menuet..... Delahaye
Thurley Hicks
Dance of the Butterflies..... Godard
Fanusvia Hendricks
Stephanie Gavotte..... Czibulka
Miss Margaret Feeney
Boat Song..... Schwarwenka
Janet Phillips
La Zingana..... Bohm
Jennie Lucchese
Thornrose..... Bendel
Capricante..... Wachs
Kathleen Meeker
(a) Papillons..... Schumann
(b) Scotch Poem..... McDowell
(c) Rondo Capriccioso..... Mendelssohn
Miss Helen Carpenter

The pupils will resume their studies September 5th, 1924.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THREE-TOED SLOTH

"I am not fond of food," said the Three-Toed Sloth. "I like leaves and buds, but I'm particular what kind I have."

"Often I will go for weeks without eating. I don't feel hungry and so I don't eat."

"Cecropia trees, which grow down in the jungles, as I believe they're called, are my particular delight."

"I'm a strange animal they say. I like to swim and I'm a good, fast swimmer, but I'm very slow on land."

"I like to hang upside down and climb about trees that way. It is so very hard for me to get along on ordinary land for I can't go upside down then and I find it awkward and difficult."

"I have splendid hook claws which help me in my climbing."

"From tree to tree I travel and always upside down. If any of my family are in a zoo they will spend most of their time upside down, and that greatly amuses the visitors at the zoo."

"I'm a devoted mother—that is I'm a good mother on the whole, but I can become quite angry with another Sloth lady."

"A Sloth gentleman I will not object to, though I'm not of an affectionate disposition."

"I'm not very sociable."

"I just can't be bothered. I move so slowly. I think slowly. I act slowly."

"I even smile slowly. Once my smile is upon my face it takes me a long time to get it off—if that is the way one should speak of stopping a smile."

"I keep the same expression almost all the time. If I'm pleased or not pleased, if I'm eating or not eating, if I'm traveling or not traveling, my same smile is to be seen."

"Some think it is rather a silly smile and others think it is quite charming. As for my thoughts about the matter—I don't bother to think about it."

"I find it easiest to have that same expression, that half-smile or whole smile or three-quarters smile or whatever kind of a smile you consider it is."

"I'm used to it. You just see yourself if you are very tired how easy it is to give a kind of weak, foolish smile"

"I Keep the Same Expression."

and how easily it is, too, to keep that same smile upon your face and not change your expression."

"Everyone knows how slowly I move. Everyone thinks of me as a slow creature."

"But please remember that I'm not such a slow swimmer."

"No, I'd be willing to race in the water."

"I wouldn't mind really racing on land, as I wouldn't mind in the least being left far behind!"

"I would be so far behind that I simply wouldn't be in the race at all."

"Besides, you couldn't call it a race if I were in it on land. That would be impossible."

"Now I must have a little nap and my baby must have one, too."

"I do believe my baby has been sleeping while I have been talking."

"Oh, well, what does it matter? I shan't bother to make my child look up to me as a wonderful, intelligent Sloth lady."

"That is too much effort. I'd rather hang upon a tree upside down and let my child do the same than I would try to make intelligent speeches and tell my child to listen to my wisdom."

"The one would be easy for me and the other well-nigh impossible!"

GAS BUGGIES—It's Different When Somebody Else Does It

The KITCHEN CABINET

(© 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

The causes of failure are: No positive aim in life; no special preparation; lack of appreciation of the many opportunities for self-improvement in youth; desire to be in the swim of fashion and pleasure, haste to get rich, selfishness.

TAKE DINNER IN THE OPEN

In these days of autos it is an easy thing for a family with a half-holiday to take a basket well stocked with good things that mother knows best how to cook and have a meal out of doors. If the tired mothers would do this often it would bring them rest and refreshment. If there are dishes to be washed let the children do them in the brook—it will be play for them.

With such a variety of paper utensils on the market it need not be a burden to "do the dishes," for a small bonfire will dispose of them and all other unedible trash. Of course, a true sportsman always pours water over the fire and is sure that it is all out before he leaves it.

One may have a very simple or just as elaborate a meal as desired. Roast potatoes and frankfurters are wholesome and hearty, and not hard for the novice to prepare.

Steak is delicious, too. Carry a sheet of heavy iron or a wire for broiling it.

Scrambled eggs need a frying pan; hot cheese sandwiches may be toasted on the sheet iron. Hamburger may be fried on the sheet iron, turning with a pancake turner.

Fresh salads may be prepared beforehand, and carried in mason jars. Thermos bottles are quite indispensable if one is not where a fire can be made or cold water procured, as one may carry hot coffee, another the cold drink.

Half the fun of an out-of-doors meal is having a fire and making coffee and cooking over and around the fire.

Sandwiches are another article of food never lacking; they may be made of any number of bread combinations with filling.

Brown bread, buttered, and chopped green pepper with onion, makes a good sandwich. Onions in the hamburger, or fresh, to be eaten from the hand, are always enjoyed by the out-door lover.

Pies that carry well will always find appetites to meet them.

and how easily it is, too, to keep that same smile upon your face and not change your expression."

"Everyone knows how slowly I move. Everyone thinks of me as a slow creature."

"But please remember that I'm not such a slow swimmer."

"No, I'd be willing to race in the water."

"I wouldn't mind really racing on land, as I wouldn't mind in the least being left far behind!"

"I would be so far behind that I simply wouldn't be in the race at all."

"Besides, you couldn't call it a race if I were in it on land. That would be impossible."

"Now I must have a little nap and my baby must have one, too."

"I do believe my baby has been sleeping while I have been talking."

"Oh, well, what does it matter? I shan't bother to make my child look up to me as a wonderful, intelligent Sloth lady."

"That is too much effort. I'd rather hang upon a tree upside down and let my child do the same than I would try to make intelligent speeches and tell my child to listen to my wisdom."

"The one would be easy for me and the other well-nigh impossible!"

Advocates Old Habits

Twentieth-century man would be healthier and happier if he would sleep with a nightcap on his head and a warming pan at his feet, according to Sir James Cantile, one of England's best-known physicians. Sir James is seventy-three and claims he can dance as nimbly as he could at seventeen.

"Don't think because you live in an age of airplanes, you know all about hygiene," he declared. "Your grandmothers were no fools."

Bald heads were much scarcer, Sir James asserted, in the days when men wore nightcaps. In a damp climate like England, he said, a nightcap is as necessary as clothes. Warming pans, likewise, aid the health of the sleeper by drying out the sheets before bedtime.

Finds Loafing Irksome

A man from Lynn, Mass., has presented a somewhat unusual request in the matter of employment to the Portland (Me.) Chamber of Commerce, says the Boston Globe. He seeks employment for which he can take as payment only board and room. He has a certain fixed income, which is given him solely on condition that he does not take employment for wages. Lack of work has become irksome, hence his unique request.

Somewhat Stale

"How was the dance at Lank Lopp's 'tuther night?" asked an acquaintance whose rheumatism had kept him from participating.

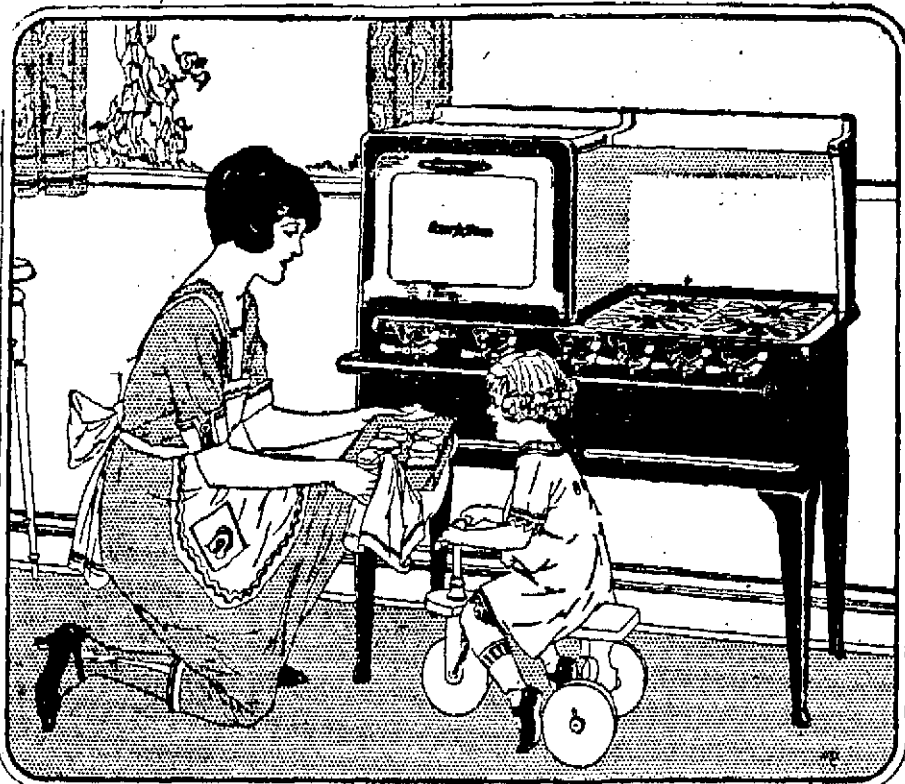

"Just about as p'l'n—common," replied Gap Johnson of Rumpus Ridge. "Some feller from over at Slippery Slap got drunk, excused himself and went out and threwed rocks at the house till Lank got sorter tired of his foolishness and took a couple of shots at him. Outside of that there wasn't nothin' new."—Indianapolis News.

"Dynamo" Dawes and Vice-Presid'cy

He Will Not Be a Figurehead—Vice-President Is Now Member of Cabinet and Nation Depends on Him.

A newspaper wag while in Cleveland remarked: "This is the first vice presidential convention I have ever attended." The joke raised a laugh, but many a true word is spoken in jest. All doubts as to the presidential nominee had been removed long before the convention was held. It was Coolidge against the field, and there was no field. But as many as a dozen candidates were mentioned for the vice presidency, all of them exceedingly able men, and the care and consideration given the question and the interest taken in "putting our man across" exceeded anything within the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The office of vice president was apotheosized.

Harding Leaned on Coolidge.
To the late Warren G. Harding was this chiefly due, both in an official and a sacrificial sense. Harding made the vice president a member of his cabinet, where he sat with the others, and his advice and counsel were repeatedly sought. Harding leaned heavily on Coolidge. Harding made the vice presidency a real job. He put the "their apparent" to work. And when Harding died a victim of overwork the shoulders of Coolidge were ready to carry the burden, the more so because he had been given such large opportunity as a presidential aid and an associate of the cabinet officials. He had first hand information of the men and their work.

Office No Longer an Ornament.
From 1804 up to four years ago the office of vice president was more or less shunned by the ambitions. It was the butt of ridicule on the part of the politicians and many of the public. The holder was considered as a somewhat ornamental set-off to the senate, like the buttons on the back of a cutaway coat, and the office was regarded as having lost its usefulness at just about the same time that the buttons became an anachronism, for they were originally placed there to hang the coat-tails away from the duelling sword.

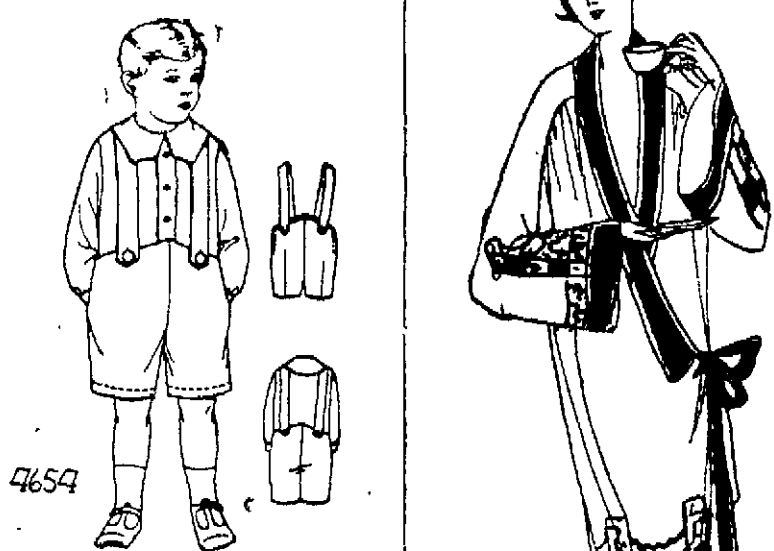

Reason for 12th Amendment.
When the constitution was framed it provided that the "person having the greatest number of votes shall be the president. . . . In every case, after the choice of the president, the person having the greatest number of votes shall be the vice president." He was the runner-up in the battle of the ballots. The complications which arose following the election which gave Jefferson and Burr 73 electoral votes each, resulted in the adoption in 1804 of the 12th amendment, which required a "vote by ballot for president and vice president. . . . the person having the greatest number of votes as vice president, shall be the vice president."

Nine Who Became President.
Of the 29 vice presidents nine afterward became president—three because of assassination of the president, three because of his death from natural causes, and three, John Adams, Thomas Jefferson and Martin Van Buren, by way of promotion. Apparently the vice president has about a 31 per cent of a chance to reach the chief magistracy, and heretofore he had been looked at as a gentleman awaiting that chance.

Coolidge and "Dynamo" Dawes.
In the 1920 convention at Chicago, the office of vice president was offered to each one of the contestants for the presidential nomination, but each vigorously declined. Calvin Coolidge was not ashamed to take it. When Platt wanted to reduce the impetuous Roosevelt to "innocuous desuetude" he eulogized him into the vice presidency and Teddy waxed exceeding wrath. But fate disposed, and Roosevelt became one of the great trinity of American presidents of which Washington and Lincoln were the other two.

Dynamo Dawes is not good timber for a figure head. The vice presidency will be a live office in his hands.

Fourth of July At Crosspatch

Mrs. Cross Found Rip Van Winkle. So She Knew Spring Was Here—Rip Always Favored Good Roads.

Crosspatch Community Center announces a dance the evening of the Fourth of July. There will be fireworks on the lawn and light refreshments, but no regular supper.

Also there will be a sort of preliminary dance and hot dog supper the evening of June 28.

For the first time in its history, Crosspatch will not be obliged to apologize about the mountain road from Willow to this picturesque place. First Commissioner Jones and his able foreman, Clarence Wolven, did a very good job cleaning out the ditches and filling the four foot hole dug by a spring torrent right in front of Crosspatch.

Then Mrs. Cross is having every "thank-you-ma'am" levelled and bridged between Sagendorf Hill and the Community House. Harvey Osterlander is doing this work and will have it completed for the party of June 28. The largest rocks will be taken out, so the road will accommodate any car. Crosspatch has acquired a car of its own this season and that calls for a good road.

The dance of July 4 and also of June 28 will be given in aid of the road fund, but Crosspatch will have the road ready before its guests come.

A good many people have been asking why Crosspatch seemed so quiet this spring? "Well, we did have a nice Memorial Day party with a lot of city friends as guests," says Mrs. Cross, "but people came to that party in straw hats and winter overcoats and we had to have a fire to keep warm, so we concentrated on fixing the road and waited for nice weather."

"The other day I found Rip Van Winkle sitting on the back stoop of the Community House, sunning himself, so I knew spring had come."

"I expected him, because we had the first thunder storm the preceding evening and the children were saying that Rip was playing game."

"I asked Rip if he would be at the 4th of July party and he said he didn't know; it was hardly worth coming down the mountain when no one had any cider for a poor old fellow. On hearing that city people were coming, he cheered up and thought he might be with us."

Crosspatch sometimes has a sports program on the afternoon of July 4, but this year will leave it to the whim of the people who like sport. The house will be open and if the young people want to run races or play barnyard golf, they can easily get up an impromptu program.

LOUNGING ROBES FOR THE SUMMER SIESTA

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

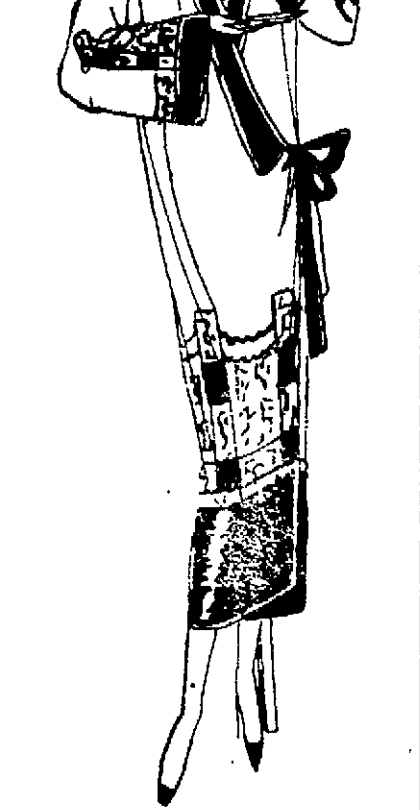

Although the mannish boudoir robe holds the center of the stage, and women are indulging in striped flannels and other masculine conceptions of the lounging robe, there are, of course, many charming ideas in more accustomed lines.

One's greatest concern at this season is that a negligee should be cool and easily slipped on. There are over the head models and those which follow the wrap-around idea so popular in coats. In fact in some negligee sections may be found robes which are easily confused with the modern coat; ribbed silks and crepes both being used, with satin popular for negligee, but less fashionable for coats. Both are liable to be feather trimmed, but this implies the dressier type, of course. In this class one must record, too, an interest in two-piece negligees, consisting of a plain slip and a coat of georgette or chiffon which usually involves ostrich fringe or panels of lace. The average voile negligee which have the cool dainty quality of chiffon. Some of these, especially when embroidered, are lined with China silk, and speaking of embroidery, eyelet types are well liked.

fons for frocks argues that materials which are figured may be used for boudoir wear, small patterned crepes and foulards are not inappropriate for this purpose.

Color is of great moment and delight in negligees. A combination of light and darker green chiffon is the out of the usual coloring used in a little slip-over negligee, whose only trimming is a wide band of embroidery, also in shades of green, at the waistline of the foundation which shows under the full length slash in the outer chiffon layer. Another one, in orchid over pink, also has the bateau neckline and its chiffon draperies arranged to fall down the center of the front in jabot fashion.

(Copyright, 1924, Fairchild.)

The practical woman demands of her negligee that it wash well and is easily converted to the striped silk shirtings made on tailored lines or in the washable crepes which are more feminine. One is drawn also to the type of thing which may be taken on tour without giving over too much space in suit case or trunk. General interest in printed chil-

Electric Corporation Getting Power From Adirondacks Proposes Extension of Lines—Would Affect Pine Hill—Other Sections Included.

By Telegraph to The Freeman. Albany, June 19.—Hearing was held in Albany Wednesday before the Public Service Commission in the petition of the New York State Gas & Electric Corporation for permission to extend its lines in several municipalities in the southern and southeastern part of the state, and for approval of the exercise of franchises.

The petitioning company plans to connect up several towns and villages in Madison, Oneida, Greene, Chenango, Otsego, Ulster, Sullivan and Schoharie counties. The localities are now served by several small plants, but if approval is granted by the commission to the pending application these plants will be brought into a unified system. Some companies in the territory affected have already been authorized by the commission to transfer their properties to the petitioning corporation.

The company proposes to build a high tension transmission line to connect with the Adirondack Power and Light Corporation, and will get its power from that corporation. The transmission line will run southerly to Colliers and thence to Delhi, continuing on to connect up the existing lines of the company in Sullivan county. The company has already been authorized by the commission to issue securities to cover the cost of the transmission line, and it is hoped to have the line completed by December of this year.

The proceeding before the commission today affected the following municipalities: Towns of Madison and Brookfield, Madison county; villages of Oriskany Falls and Bridge-water, and towns of Augusta, Sanger-field and Bridge-water, Oneida county; towns of Lexington and Halcott, Greene county; town of North Norwich and village of New Berlin, Chenango county; towns of Cherry Valley, Westford, Maryland and Plainfield, Otsego county; village of Pine Hill, Ulster county; villages of Monticello and Liberty and towns of Liberty, Thompson and Rockland, Sullivan county; and towns of Jefferson and Gilboa, Schoharie county.

Practically the only opposition at the hearing today came from companies already having rights in a few of the municipalities affected by the application.

Appearances today included W. J. Henderson for New York State Gas & Electric Corporation; H. W. Smith, president, and E. C. Smith, attorney, for Oakland Power Company; M. H. Bigelow, attorney, Upper Hudson Electric and Railroad Company and United Hudson Electric Company; Edward J. Welch, attorney, Great Bear Light and Power Company; John J. Hubbard and E. W. Ehmman, Fulton County Gas & Electric Company; L. F. Wright, county superintendent of highways, for Schoharie county, appeared in cases affecting the towns of Gilboa and Jefferson, Schoharie county.

MOVIE QUEEN "BIKES" TO KEEP HEALTHY

Mary Pickford and Douglas Fairbanks paid a visit to Toronto on their way to Europe last month. Toronto being the birthplace of Mary. While in Toronto Mary roamed all through the neighborhood where she had spent her early days and she experienced more heart tugs during the brief moments that she was there than she had ever experienced in all her career.

Asked her fondest recollection of her girlhood days, she promptly replied, "My bicycle! We couldn't really afford one, you know, but my mother saved up and bought one for me. I found the little gate on Orde street where I used to ride through on my bicycle, but I've lost a little pathway that I used to know. I really experienced several thrills here today."

"I used to think the world of my bicycle—it was a red one," she said, describing how she enjoyed riding around the paths in the vicinity of University avenue. She remembered them all so well and the old chestnut trees, too. There was a bicycle right-of-way, a side path which used to run along in front of her old home.

Miss Pickford still takes keen enjoyment out of a ride on a bicycle. She has one at her home in California, and when she is not busy, both she and Doug go for a spin on the beautiful roads by way of diversion from motoring and for the healthful exercise in which both hold such faith.

Ordinations at Evangelical Synod

Two candidates were ordained by President Samuel Trexler, D. D., at a service held during the convention of the Evangelical Lutheran Synod of New York and New England, in the Church of the Holy Trinity, 65th street and Central Park West, New York City, on Wednesday evening.

One of the candidates was Clarence L. Schaertel, of the Philadelphia Theological Seminary, who is to become pastor of St. Paul's, Fort Plain, a church with a history going back to the days of the Revolution. The other was Cosimo Dell'Oso, who will undertake an entirely new Synodical enterprise—that of mission work among the Italians of New York's East Side.

The Rev. Frederick A. Bowers, of Richmond Hill, who preached the ordination sermon, declared that the problems of the Christian minister were essentially the same today as when St. Paul was a missionary in Europe and Asia.

"In these days," he said, "it is the custom to organize and form societies, to classify and divide big problems, to create new terms to define the ills of humanity; but below the surface we find the sin, sorrow and suffering that Jesus knew. We find no cure but that in the teaching of Christ."

"The rewards of the minister are not to be found in the money he can earn, nor the position and power he can achieve. His name may be unknown even in his own church; but the souls of men and women bear the record of his work. His joy and his glory may be found in his labors with the sick, the afflicted, the sorrowful, the poor and the needy. If he is a true follower of his Lord he will not worry about what he can 'get out of his ministry,' but what he 'can give in his ministry.' The one word which should stand out above all others in his work is the word 'service.'"

BIBLE CLASS ENJOYS GOLDEN RULE HOSPITALITY

The Men's Bible Class of the Fair Street Reformed Church held their annual dinner and outing at the Golden Rule Inn at Ulster Park Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock. The dinner was "a rip roaring success" to use the expression of those who were there. One hundred forty-two members and their wives and friends were served a fine chicken dinner to their full capacity. Zucca's orchestra furnished the music, with Zucca leading the singing with his usual vim and style. After the dinner a dance was held in the Golden Rule Inn Hall where a good time was enjoyed by all. Three cheers were given the management of the place which goes to prove if you want to make a crowd happy feed them well and every one voted the dinner be held there next year.

THE CLOVE.

The Clove, June 19.—Miss Ida Stephens is spending a few days with her sister, Mrs. Charles Rhinehart, at this place.

Henry Wells and family have moved from High Falls to Clearwater Cottage, near Spring Farm.

The heaviest storm of the season thus far visited this place Saturday afternoon. It is rumored that three cows of Robert Neish were struck dead by lightning during the storm.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Sheeley of Lake Katrine and Charles Mutschler of Brooklyn spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. John C. Yeaple.

Mrs. Mary Countryman and daughter, Mrs. Roscoe Schoonmaker, spent Thursday with Mrs. Alvina Yeaple. A number from this place attended the carnival at Kingston Saturday night.

School closed Friday for the summer vacation. Children are very happy these days.

If nothing prevents, there will be services at The Clove chapel Sunday evening, June 22, by the Rev. Thomas Braithwaite.

Miss Ethel DuBois spent one day the past week with Miss Ida Sheeley. Gilbert Edwards has purchased a Ford car.

The many friends of Simon Terwilliger were sorry to hear of his recent misfortune in the loss of a new Overland car by fire, due to gasoline tank exploding. Very luckily, occupants of the car were not injured. The Mohonk truck, with Cecil Gray, driver, will finish hauling lumber from Shandaken to the Sand Bank Farm this week.

The ten stall garage on the Yeaple place near Mt. Rest is completed.

Mrs. Victor Exinger of Middletown is spending a time with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Terwilliger.

Fernando Terwilliger and John Trowbridge spent Sunday fishing at Ashokan dam. They met with fine luck.

Well Instructed.

President Alvaro Obregon, of Mexico, had a narrow escape from death when his car broke loose from a train at Puna and dashed down a hill. The engineer of a passenger train ascending the incline reversed his engine and backed his train at such speed that the Presidential car struck with little shock. President James Rowland Angell, of Yale University, has been taken to Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, for special organic treatment. The kidnapping and murder of Giacomo Matteotti, wealthy Socialist member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, is reported in Rome seriously to have shaken Fascist Premier Benito Mussolini's grip on the Government. C. Bascom Slemp, of Virginia, private secretary to President Coolidge, denies he intends to resign because of friction with William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican National Committee, but says he will conduct the campaign in an advisory capacity.

Employees Seek
R. R. Investments

Turn Naturally to Such Investments Same as Savings Banks, Says Chief Stone of Locomotive Engineers' Brotherhood.

Declaring that the interest of railroad workers and the savings banks holding railroad securities were related, Warren S. Stone, grand chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, in an address before the annual convention of the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks, urged cooperation between the two groups in effecting a solution of the railroad problem.

"The mutual savings bank and the railroad worker have a common interest in the transportation problem," said Mr. Stone. "The savings banks and other investing institutions are the creditors of the railroads to the extent of nearly three billions of dollars."

"The railroad brotherhoods have frequently been accused of favoring governmental ownership. They have no illusions in that direction. But to many that has seemed the only possible weapon against a financial control which could envision the real problems of labor only as so many figures on a balance sheet. The brotherhoods have no quarrel with private ownership, if such ownership can be administered with a genuine trusteeship of the rights of the public, labor, and the investor."

"There is a further reason why labor and the savings bank investor should fall into step on the railroad problem, because labor today is investing its savings on a very large scale. Throughout the United States there have sprung up in the past three years more than thirty labor banks, with an equal number in process of organization. The resources of these institutions have grown in that time until they approach 100 million dollars. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers owns and operates ten of these banks."

"As railroad men we turn naturally, just as the savings banks have turned, to railroad investments."

"As railroad men we realize that the railroads must be protected equally against a type of politician who seeks votes at the expense of the public treasury or the railroad investor."

"We believe that the mobilized saving power of labor employed through safe and intelligently managed investment can lift the whole problem of relationships between capital and labor to a plane never before reached in America."

NEW OPERATION FOR PARALYSIS

American Surgeons Elated
Over Discovery of Australian Scientists.

Chicago.—One of medical science's best and most significant discoveries, a surgical remedy expected to cure forms of spastic paralysis originating in an affection of the sympathetic nerve, will be presented for the first time in this country in Chicago, October, when Dr. John Hunter, Dr. N. D. Royle of Sydney, Australia, come to the city to explain their operation. It consists in severing the sympathetic nerve connection involved.

Plans for the doctors' Chicago preliminary to their appearance in New York before the clinic committee, were announced by Dr. Frank H. Martin, director general of American College of Surgeons, and man responsible for their local operation.

Dr. Mayo Impressed.
Dr. Martin and Dr. Wm Mayo of Chester, Minn., returned recently from a three months' tour of Australia and New Zealand. While in Sydney they visited the famous clinics of Dr. Hunter, the twenty-seven-year-old surgeon, and Dr. Royle, thirty-five, surgeon. They investigated the alleged cure of spastic paralysis, and were sufficiently confident of its results to invite its two discoverers to America.

The operation, as explained by Dr. Martin, is simple. It may be performed, the Chicago surgeon predicted, by any reputable surgeon who has studied the work of the Australian doctors.

Spastic paralysis and Parkinson's disease (variants of palsy) are diseases affecting the voluntary muscles of the extremities, and are accompanied by a rigidity or overtone of these muscles. This results in the loss of control of the extremities.

Experiments on Animals.
Dr. Hunter, working on the theory of the sympathetic nerve tones the muscles, experimented to prove, conversely, that an overtone of muscle might be corrected by dissection of the sympathetic nerve. He conducted a series of painstaking experiments on animals, large guinea pigs, and celebrated goats.

Then Dr. Royle, the surgeon, applied the scientist's theory and cut the sympathetic nerve in affected animals. The results were satisfactory, according to the data given Dr. Mayo and Martin.

After further experimentation on animals Dr. Royle ventured operations on human paralytic victims. "But he," Dr. Martin explained, "performs so badly afflicted that they could have been made worse."

The results again were satisfactory. And, as the last step in the process, the surgeon severed the nerve in patients less seriously afflicted by spastic paralysis. In these cases, too, as evidenced by the patients' testimony to the American doctors, the rigidity, the overtone of the muscles, disappeared. More than one patient threw away his crutches and began to walk.—Chicago Tribune.

MANSON HOUSE BUILDING.

THINGS UNUSUAL

By T. T. MAXEY

THE SKYSCRAPER CHURCH

In 1881, when Chicago was in its swaddling clothes, the Methodists purchased a plot of ground in the downtown section of the town and built their "first" church center upon it.

By the time 1886 rolled around, the increased growth made the securing of larger quarters an absolute necessity. In the meantime, the business part of the city had shaped itself around the church and the value of the church property had increased at a tremendously rapid rate. The Methodists might have sold out at a handsome profit, but instead they decided to retain their holdings and capitalized the situation by combining religion and business after a new fashion, producing a practical novelty. They built a building several stories high, within which was a church, and rented the ground floor and all other space not used for church purposes, for business purposes.

History has again repeated itself. The attendance of 1922 had outgrown the church of 1886. Their plot had become the center of the city's retail business section. So again, the Methodists enlarged their quarters and in duplicating their former plan on a far larger and far more grand scale, they produced the tallest building in Chicago, the most unusual church building in America, and the highest church building in all the world.

This magnificent skyscraper church is 80 by 182 feet and 21 stories (and basement), or 290 feet high. The corner is surmounted by an elaborate but substantial spire which "carries on" 296 feet farther—making the total height of the structure 586 feet.

An elaborate entrance leads from the street directly into a veritable dream of a "house of worship," surrounded by shops and stores within. This secluded church is modeled somewhat after the style of the English churches, elegant but simple, dignified, and in silent accord with the creed of the church, with a seating capacity of about 1,300 persons and containing an organ as fine in quality and pleasing in tone as the experts of the organ-builder's art could produce. The original church is said to have cost $580. The new structure, its graceful spire dwarfing all other skyscrapers in Chicago, cost about $5,000,000, and the annual income from the space rented for stores and offices is a fabulous one.

Scrubwoman Rings Alarm

Cambridge, Ohio.—Hearing the burglar alarm of the Citizens Savings bank of Cambridge ringing in police headquarters early one morning, a squad of patrolmen went to the bank and surrounded it. Then they cautiously entered, to find a janitress on her knees trying to pick up a small piece of wood with her soapy fingers. It was a button connected with the burglar alarm.

Gushes Water, Not Oil

Pittsburg, Kan.—Pittsburg brought in a gusher recently. It was a water well, not an oil well, that was finished within a block of the business center of the city, at the edge of a sidewalk on a side street, the city put down its fourth deep well for water purposes.

BROWN HEN'S PRIDE

BROWN HEN was very much surprised one morning when she returned from her breakfast to find in her nest, which she had left with three eggs in it, five very large brown eggs.

Her eyes popped open with wonderment for a minute as she gazed at the handsome eggs, but her pride soon got the better of her surprise and she said to herself, "I must have been mistaken. That is all there is about it, for here are the eggs and this is the nest I have been sitting on."

"Anyway, why shouldn't the eggs be brown? My feathers are brown and I think it very good taste to lay brown eggs and such beauties, too."

"But, of course," and here Brown Hen tossed her head with pride, "of course, I have always laid large eggs, but somehow these seem to be the largest I ever remember; the chicks from this batch should make all the other hens very envious."

Brown Hen could not sit still. She had to hop off her nest every little while to look at those big eggs and once when she was admiring the eggs old Speckled Hen was passing and Brown Hen called to her to look at the handsomest eggs she ever saw.

"Clucked and Squawked in Vain"

Speckled Hen looked into Brown Hen's nest and then she looked at Brown Hen a second. "Don't you know what those eggs are?" she asked. "If you take my advice, and I am old enough to know, you will peck every one of them and get them out of your nest. Then make a nest in some place that cannot be found until you have hatched your chicks."

"Spoil those wonderful eggs!" said Brown Hen. "You are jealous, Speckled Hen, and you want me to destroy them. I shall do nothing of the kind." And Brown Hen jumped on her nest again and looked after Speckled Hen with angry eyes.

"You won't be so proud when you see those chicks," was Speckled Hen's parting shot.

One morning Brown Hen proudly showed herself with five little chicks in the barnyard. Brown Hen was the only one that did not notice that her children's feet were queer.

"Madam, I would see Dr. Drake if I were you," said old White Hen. "Your children do not seem to walk as chickens should. They waddle a bit."

"Envious," said Brown Hen to herself. Then she said aloud, "My children are more graceful than most chicks. White Hen, that's all."

But when old Granny Duck spied Brown Hen and her family she began to quack. "What do you mean by strutting around here with my grand-children?" she asked. "Can't you hatch out a brood of hen chickens instead of mixing into our family?"

"What do you mean?" inquired Brown Hen, so surprised she didn't know what else to say.

"I mean," said Granny Duck, "that those chicks you are so proudly showing around here are ducks."

"I don't believe it," said Brown Hen. "You are jealous because I have such handsome children. That is all."

"Wait and see," said Granny, waddling away.

A short time after this Brown Hen was walking around by the duck pond and away ran her children and into the pond they went while poor Brown Hen clucked and squawked in vain trying to call them back.

"What did I tell you?" said Granny Duck, swimming along beside the ducklings. "I knew our children the minute I saw them."

"I told you so," cackled White Hen. "You let the farmer fool you. I would just like to see him try that on me. I'd peck every big brown egg I found in my nest before I would be seen with a brood of ducklings."

Poor Brown Hen, there was no use saying anything now for there were her big children swimming out on the pond. She had been fooled and her tail feather drooping, she walked sadly away to hide under the currant bushes, feeling she could never again hold up her head in that barnyard.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your name; its history; meaning; whence it was derived; its influence; your lucky day, lucky jewel

ELIZA

ELIZA is another of the Elizabeth cycle of feminine names. With the single exception of Mary, there is no other name in the language of any country which has so many full-grown, fully independent offsprings. Eliza, which at first glance would seem to be Elizabeth with one syllable removed, has really an interesting little history of her own.

The name means, of course, "God's oath." The Divine title known to man before especial revelation to Moses in the burning bush was the Hebrew word Eli, which corresponds to our term Delti. This word served as a prefix to many Biblical proper names. The first was Eleazer, the name of Abraham's steward who went to bring home Rebecca. Later the name changed to Eleazer and was applied to Aaron's eldest surviving son.

Following this bit of etymological history, Eliza would seem more likely the feminine of Eleazar than a mere contraction of Elizabeth. The latter explanation, however, is most generally adhered to, due, perhaps, to the influence of Elizabethan poetry and drama, which endeavored to improve on the name of the good queen, by terming her Eliza.

The popularity and prevalence of Eliza became widespread early in the Nineteenth century, and there are frequent instances of both names being given in baptism to different children in the same family.

The aquamarine is Eliza's talismanic gem. It promises her travel and change, and many friends. Saturday is her lucky day and 2 her lucky number.

I HEARD a neighbor say, "This life is pretty gray!" Whereat it was my whim To answer unto him That gray e'er seemed to me A color good to be. The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

MARE-BROWED MEN

"MARE-BROWED" men are described as those whose eyebrows meet above the nose. In many sections of this country and Canada it is considered unlucky to meet such a man when starting on a journey, going hunting, or about to engage in any new enterprise. The superstition is patently a form of the superstition of the evil eye which, having come down to us through unnumbered centuries, is as potent now in some countries as it ever was. In Italy and in the Levant, for instance, the belief in the evil eye is taken as a matter of course and few there be in those lands who would question it. The superstition as a whole has already been dealt with in this series. That the mare-browed man superstition is a phase of it is evidenced by the fact that in some sections of Canada and this country such a man is supposed to be able to "cast spells." The unting of the eyebrows gives a peculiar look to the eyes and oftentimes a sinister one—it emphasizes the power of the glance as it were, and thus naturally calls to mind the "evil-eye." The superstition regarding ill luck attached to crossed-eyes persons and mare-browed persons are the two most common forms in which the evil eye superstition manifests itself in this country; except in cases where immigrants have brought with them across the Atlantic the superstition in its original form.

Red Convention Not to Nominate

By Telegram to The Freeman.
Convention Hall, St. Paul, Minn., June 19.—The Farmer-Labor convention here, its machinery jammed by a fresh denunciation from Senator Robert M. La Follette, Republican, Wisconsin, today was preparing to adjourn without naming a third party ticket, content, apparently, with having formed a national third party and adopt a platform stressing communistic doctrines for control of the government.

This platform, considered one of the major triumphs of the Reds who attended the convention, today loomed as the last critical issue between the radicals and the more conservative delegates. Differences which it had been announced might cause the farmer delegates to bolt the convention, had apparently been smoothed over by compromises.

EXILES FIND PEACE IN CANADIAN CITY

Russian Aristocrats Forget Sorrows in Their Labors.

Employed chiefly as sales girls or as common laborers, a colony in Toronto of Russian aristocrats, exiled from their own country, already includes 30 or 40 members, says the Boston Transcript.

The story of Baroness Lozina Lozinsky, daughter of Russia's last minister of justice, now a sales girl in Toronto, is typical.

Here is another sales girl in a local gift shop, Mme. Zola Stasenska, slender, blonde, with the carriage of the salon, and the hands and features of an artist. But those slender hands now handling delicate bric-a-brac have gripped the handles of a Vickers machine gun. Those gentle eyes have squinted the sights of a mitrailleuse.

For Madame Stasenska is one of the few survivors of the famous Korniloff regiment, was decorated for bravery on the field of battle, and served as a machine gunner in Baron Wrangle's ill-fated campaign against the Bolshevik forces. She began her military service as a field nurse. Later she was one of a horde of 10,000 herded in Constantinople barracks where typhus took a toll of 3,000.

Another sales girl is Mme. Valentina Gloushova, a dark Circassian. For two and a half years she served as a nurse attached to the brigade to which her husband's regiment was attached, seeing much fighting in the Crimea and around Odessa. When disaster and disorganization overtook the Russian forces, this fine horsewoman found her place, not in the hospital, tents, but helping with the carrying forward of ammunitions and the evacuation of the wounded from the forward area.

When final desolation fell she found her way to Constantinople, where, she shared with Madame Stasenska the horrors of the typhus barracks. Neither have heard of their husbands, who were Russian officers, since the debacle.

In a large local factory is a laborer, who is Baron Nicolai Ropp, once an officer of the Imperial guard, and the only surviving member of one of the oldest families in Russia. Watch him at work piling wood on flat cars, and try to imagine him as he once was, an exquisite of St. Petersburg, a dandy at the court of the last czar.

Walk into the Royal Ontario museum and watch a middle-aged man at work dusting cases. Then try to picture him in uniform and gold lace on the bridge of a battleship answering the salutes of officers as they spring to attention at his approach. An admiral of the Russian fleet, Guidenoff, who, like Nelson, lost an eye in the service of his country, turned museum cleaner, his arms now a mop and a duster.

Here is a factory where dolls are made, kievie dolls, the beautiful blue-eyed babies of the summer speller. Two men bend over with brushes at a bench industriously painting ruby lips and rose-leaf blushes on waxen faces. One of these men who thus turns out prizes for the boardwalk flappers is Capt. Paul Danichik, formerly of the Russian navy; the other, Capt. Victor Gromoff of the guards.

Then again, in a factory which makes washing machines, a mechanic works, Capt. Vladimir Markoff, holder of the St. George's cross, the Russian V. C. He is almost a cripple from wounds, but his spirit still soars high.

Tall Woman Handicapped

It is the tiny women who have inspired all the sweet pet names of love. Ducky. My little cabbage. Snookie-oonsies. Honey. Dumpling. Baby. Kiddie. Dear little thing.

No woman of stock size ever inspired anything more important than darling, angel, or dearest.

And there is something about holding up your cheek for a kiss which your tall woman, who must graciously incline her head to receive, never realizes or relishes.

And there is something still more about being folded tenderly to a masculine bosom, there to rest like a sweet tired bird, which no perfect six-footer can ever know.—From "Glad-Eye Views," by Jane Doe.

Island of Nauru

A Lagoon in Nauru.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.)

When Germany started into the colonizing business centuries later than other powers and got control of the world's "left overs," she looked on the island of Nauru, far out in the Pacific, as one of the least of her possessions. But even before the World war it came to be recognized that Nauru, its size considered, is one of the world's richest islands. Now it is under a British mandate and the wealth it produces is falling into other coffers. Phosphate rock is the reason for Nauru's importance; it holds millions of tons of this valuable fertilizer.

Nauru, or Pleasant Island, is almost at the jumping-off place of the world. It is only thirteen degrees west of the International date line, and half a degree south of the Equator. Thus it is one of what sailors call the "Line Islands."

Before it fell to Germany it knew no white rulers, but was governed by its own laws and chiefs; but while influence had impinged upon it for many years. Whaling ships from New England ports called there and traded firearms for drinking coconuts and island pigs. It was rather a poor island in those far-off days, before its great wealth was discovered. It had no sandalwood or tortoise shell; no pearls or beche-de-mer; not even copra, for copra was not made in the Pacific before 1872 and coconut oil was not an article of commerce.

The Nauruans have never been cannibals, but they had the reputation of being savage warriors. A traveler from New Zealand who visited the island just before the Germans took possession found the natives all armed and involved in deadly feuds. He counted nine kinds of rifles of English and American make, besides several cannons. There were then ten white traders living near each other along the beach and some of their half-caste descendants are there today.

When Germany took over the islands she gave the natives a certain number of days to give up their arms. They generally obeyed, but a few threw theirs into the caves which underlie the island, where they are found from time to time by exploring parties.

Germany Taught Copra Making.
There are two things to the Germans' credit in the Pacific: They built roads and they taught the natives to make copra.

Copra is easily made and stored. The meat of the ripe coconut is broken into pieces and dried in the sun; just long enough to extract the moisture; then it is bagged and ready for sale. In the South seas copra is a magic word. For this the Pacific trader dares the malaria and savages of the Solomons and the New Hebrides, and the teeth of the coral reefs. The trade store and copra shed stand on the beach of every coral isle, and when a steamer or schooner calls, the surf-baths go in and out, over the reef at high tide or through intricate channels when there is an open lagoon, carrying trade goods and returning with bags of copra.

The German colonial government did not know what a treasure it had under its feet, but was content to run a little trade store, a branch of the Jaluit store, which sold to the natives tobacco and beer, Alaska canned salmon, sugar rice and ship biscuits in exchange for copra. It also sold prints and thin Japanese silks for the Mother Hubbard dresses which the American missionaries taught the native women to wear and for the lavinas which the native men wore to the mission churches.

Then came a great change, owing to the discovery of phosphate.

According to geologists, Nauru, like Aphrodite, rose dripping from the sea ages ago. This emergence may have been sudden, or the process of elevation may have been gradual. At any rate, when the coral island was exposed it must have looked like the fantastic structures built in aquaria, with pinnacles, towers, bridges, flying buttresses, and other architectural fantasies upreared into the air.

Then came the sea birds, millions and millions of them, feeding on the abundant sea food, nesting in the coral, hatching their young in ever-increasing multitudes, and depositing the waste of their bodies in the coral till the lower crevices were filled and a gradually rising body of guano attained at length a level with the tops of the pinnacles, and then rose above them and lay in a level plateau across the island.

Vast Phosphate Deposits.

On the margin the rains, the winds, and the breakers, spouting high against the coral, washed away this deposit, so that ramparts of bare pinnacles stood up and still stand all around the island; but the coral walls back from the shore held safe the treasure. After this the teeming bird life deserted the island, how or why is a mystery.

Then under Nature's forces a transformation occurred. Guano is chiefly phosphoric acid and nitrogen; coral is chiefly lime. Somehow, by the close contact, the guano became changed into phosphate of lime, which is guano raised to the nth power. It had now become a hard rock, odorless and generally colorless, although some specimens show fine, dark stratification and take a high polish.

A British trading company operating from Sydney discovered phosphate on Ocean Island, a smaller neighbor of Nauru, and then found the larger deposits on the latter island. A lease was obtained from the Germans on a partnership basis and when the World war started the exploitation was proving profitable for both groups.

There were exciting times on the little islands during the war. An Australian warship called, replaced the German flag by the British and received the agreement of the German residents to submit to British control. But when the ship had sailed away the Germans seized control and deported the British residents to Ocean Island. It was months before word could be gotten to the outside world and another ship sent to arrest the Germans and restore British control on the island.

Nauru has about twelve hundred natives. In 1918 all indicated their desire to become British subjects.

How Phosphate Is Mined.

Phosphate is mined by Chinese coolies in open quarries, but these are not like stone quarries, where everything is taken out as the work progresses. The phosphate is packed between the coral pinnacles as tightly as the filling in a tooth and must be excavated, leaving the pinnacles standing.

There is, perhaps, no hotter working place on earth, for as the workmen descend, digging and blasting, they are below the level of the trade wind's cool breath and exposed to the fierce rays of the tropic sun.

When a coolie has filled a pair of baskets he hangs one on each end of a carrying-pole and makes his way by devious paths through the worked-out places to a central carrier, called the "flying fox," running on a cable. He dumps his baskets and trots back for another load, while the carrier conveys the phosphate to a hopper, a tall wooden tower with chutes, from which it is dropped into cars ready to take it to the dryers, huge buildings containing crushing and drying machinery and storage bins for the finished product.

Two classes of laborers, the workers in the phosphate field and the loading crews on the cars and boats, include few natives of Nauru. The former, as we have seen, are Chinese coolies, the latter Kanakas recruited from other islands.

Nauru is about seven and a half miles long and half as wide and is shaped like an oryster. It is bordered by the reef, which is bare at low tide, and inside of which is a beach of white coral sand. The beach above tide level is covered with coconut palms, interspersed with pandanus and other trees and shrubs.

Back of the coconut plain rises a palisade of tall coral pinnacles whose summit is the phosphate plateau, which is covered by a forest of evergreen trees, the most common one being the tamanu with handsome deep-green leaves, resembling laurel, and flowers like orange blossoms.

In the center of one end of the island is a small lagoon surrounded by a coconut grove. The broad plateau is uninhabited, as the natives live only under the coconut trees.

Financial and Commercial

By Telegram to The Freeman.
New York, June 19.—In spite of industrial news that was by no means cheerful, stocks continued to disclose a confident tone in the forenoon trading on the stock exchange today. Such adverse development as a cut in tire prices by Flak Rubber, reduction in the quotations for copper products by the American Brass and Sheet, the passing of the dividend on United Alloy Common, a slump of about ten per cent in revenue freight loadings in the week of June compared with the corresponding period of last year and a further, although slight, increase in domestic crude oil production, found little or no reflection in the price movements.

Colorado Fuel was again an active leader, setting up to a new high at 46 1/2 on pool buying in connection with the company's oil possibilities. Marine Preferred and Central Leather quotes reflected the improved outlook in their respective industries. The rise in Stewart Warner was explained by the official news of the closing of a big call with the General Motor for the installation of Stewart Warner Vacuum tanks on the latter company's cars. General Electric, yellow cab and Philadelphia and Reading Coal continued yesterday's forward swing.

The only disconcerting development in the industrial group was the acute weakness in Atlantic Refining, which registered a further sharp drop of 6 points to a new low of 92, or about 48 points below the high level of the year.

Petroleum shares, in general stood up very well in the face of this weakness. Another dark spot was Kelly Springfield which sold down to a new low record of 11.

Uniform strength was displayed in the railroad list. Buying comprised both the dividend paying and minor shares, being especially heavy in New York Central, C. and O., Nickel Plate, Southern Pacific, New Haven and Rock Island.

Call money renewed at 2 per cent.

To Use Radio to Teach Africans How to Farm

Washington.—Natives in the heart of Africa will be able soon to perform their ancient ceremonial dances to the strains of jazz through a radio loudspeaker, and will be given instructions in modern agricultural methods in the same way under plans of British officials of Kenya colony. Trade Commissioner R. A. May at Alexandria, Egypt, has advised the Commerce department that plans already have been made to install a radio set with loud-speaker in every village. Besides daily musical programs, he said, farming instructions will be sent to the natives in their own language.

Werner Wins; Romanelli Loses

Bouts at Fair Grounds Are Not Largely Attended—Exhibitions Were the Best Ever Staged Here.

A slim crowd witnessed a very pretty boxing exhibition at the Kingston Fair Grounds Wednesday evening, despite the fact that it was an ideal night for an outdoor show.

The third bout on the card between Joe Werner of this city and Johnny Middy of Peekskill proved to be the best bout of the evening. Werner weighed in at 143 pounds and Middy at 142. This bout was so interesting that the feature bouts were not appreciated. Werner was given the decision.

Had the Romanelli-Weber bout lasted a round or so longer, possibly this could not have been said of the third fight. Weber knocked out the Bridge City fighter in the third.

The feature bout between Jimmy Ruzzo and Sammy Marino, both boys weighing around the 115 mark, was a beautiful exhibition of scientific fighting, especially the work of Ruzzo, who earned the decision.

In the opening bouts Joe Coffey lost to Marty Duffy in a four round affair, and Dorando beat Young Kaufman in a six round thriller.

Weber Gives and Takes.

In the third bout of eight rounds, clashing fists were in order when Middy, a piano mover by trade, and Joe Werner stood toe to toe in an attempt to land the killer. First thing out of the box, both boys started real work and the most experienced follower of the cauliflower occupation would have agreed that the bout would never go the limit of eight rounds. This certainly would have happened, if Middy was not made of a superior coating of flesh. From the third round on, Werner led the battle and hammered Middy all over the canvas, but he could not put him out. Middy looked very bad at times, but it only lasted for a few seconds and he would come back strong. The Peekskill boy was not very skillful but he could hit and could stand the punching. Werner's ability also to take the hefty punches and shake them off entitled him to honors. The local boxer received a well-deserving hand when he finished his work. This was the second victory for Werner at the local arena. Joe's followers are looking for some fine results in the near future.

Romanelli Looked Poor.

Tony Saracco of New York was originally scheduled to box Joe Romanelli of Poughkeepsie, but an injury to the former prevented his appearing. Dave Weber was substituted for Saracco. If Romanelli was in for a trimming last night, it is very doubtful if Saracco could have finished a better job than Mr. Weber. The bout scheduled to go ten rounds, lasted but two full rounds and a few seconds of the third. From the signal of the gong, starting the fight until the finish, the classy, clever, hard hitting Weber made the Bridge City boxer look foolish. Romanelli swinging like a rusty gate, missed his point every time, connecting about the shoulder with the usual ineffective results. Weber fought differently, he did nothing else but jab the Poughkeepsie boy into a knot at his feet on the canvas. Romanelli's seconds shouted for a foul, but the crowd, the referee, and the judges didn't see it, and so it couldn't have happened. Weber made a tremendous hit.

Ruzzo Gets Popular Award.

Jimmy Ruzzo, and Sammy Marino staged a clever exhibition of ten rounds in the final bout. Ruzzo was the aggressor, and staged a brilliant display of scientific boxing to the delight of the crowd. Ruzzo was awarded the decision, which met with the approval of the customers. The little boxer weighed three pounds less than Marino, tipping the scales at 114. If Ruzzo was made of Indian rubber he couldn't have bounced around the ring any more. Marino was less active than his opponent, and did not pile up the points, but he was still going strong at the tenth.

Preliminary Bouts.

In the opening bout Joe Coffey, local boxer, weighing in at 146 pounds, lost to Marty Duffy of New York, 146 1/2 in a four round struggle. Joe went strong all the way, but the New Yorker clipped him a few stout ones, and Coffey took the count of nine at one stage of the struggle.

Joe Dorando of Jersey City and Joey Kaufman of New York staged a brilliant exhibition. Dorando weighed in at 125 1/2 pounds and Kaufman at 125. Dorando was awarded the decision. Both young boys displayed much talent and received a great hand. Dorando was the aggressor throughout and tapped his clever opponent more often, carrying the greater number of rounds.

The card as a whole, reflected much credit upon the matchmaker, Tom Hylas was again the referee and J. J. Flynn and James Brennan, both of New York, the judges.

MYSTERIOUS RUSSIAN UNDER ARREST AT MILAN

By Telegraph to The Freeman.
Rome, June 19.—A mysterious Russian was arrested today at Milan in connection with the kidnapping and killing of Socialist Deputy Giacomo Matteotti. The prisoner is said to have confessed shadowing Matteotti prior to the crime and travelling to Milan with the slayers after the murder.
Despite agitation in some quarters conditions are rapidly becoming normal. Premier Mussolini is still in control. From all indications the present cabinet will continue without any further important revisions.
Practically all persons suspected of complicity in the killing of Matteotti are now under arrest and the Fascist authorities promise speedy justice.
